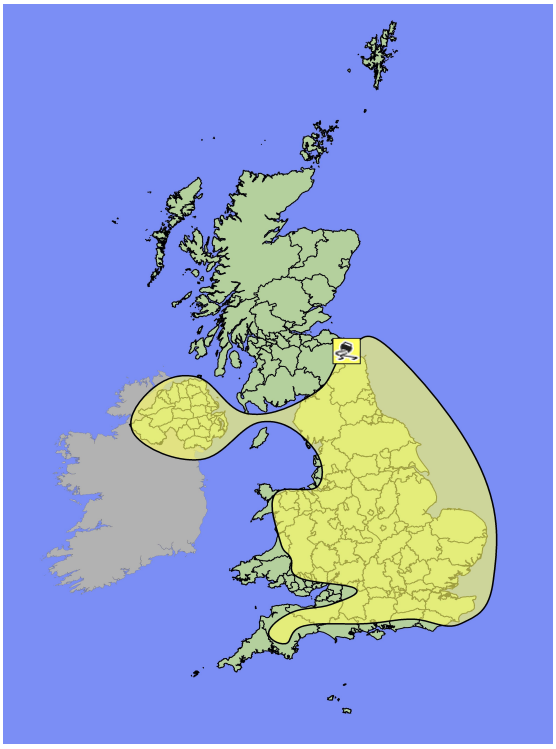
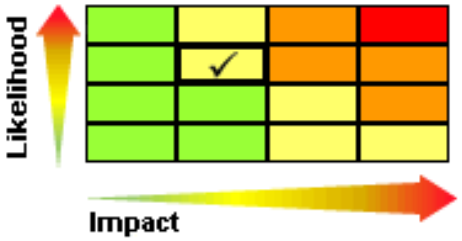
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Wintry showers will extend down into England and Wales, giving a covering of snow in places inland, especially over high ground. As temperatures fall, ice will form readily on wet roads and pavements.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 00:05 on Tue, 05th Feb 2013 until 11:00 on Tue, 05th Feb 2013

Wintry showers and strong winds will continue in many areas overnight, although some clearer spells will develop in the south and east. Surfaces will remain wet from earlier showers and from continued showers of rain, sleet and snow, allowing ice to form.

The public should be aware of the risk of icy stretches on roads on pavements.
